Fragment from: "A Parenthesis In Eternity", pag 308 e.v.

Joel:

It is so easy to think that we can be of benefit to one another. This is the natural belief of the natural man, the ego-man. One branch cannot really benefit another branch, however, because what ever benefit may come to you or to me through each other is really only the Life Itself using us as Its instrument.

The person who knows this is beginning to purge himself of ego because he does not see himself as the source of someone else's good: he is thinking only in terms of one, not of two. Where there are two, there will eventually be friction, even when temporarily one is doing good for another. The antidote for all friction is a realization of oneness.

The ego-man is always desiring something out here; he is always getting something, doing something, achieving something, and that inner and outer resultant turmoil can be felt.
